I have been a listener to public radio for my entire life. I live near philadelphia, pa and travel down to the New Jersey shore a lot. Ever since XM came out with the instant weather and traffic, it has done nothing but help make my trip easier. The only other station that has regular traffic reports only has them once every ten minutes. All that radio station provides is trouble spots. With XM instant traffic and weather, it not only gives me the trouble spots but breaks down every road in the metropolitan area. It gives me average speeds and the amount of time that it will take me to get from one major road to another. Without this service driving would be a nightmare. Please do not take satellite radio traffic and weather away from us, just because it provides a service that Clear Channel and Viacom will not produce. Both of those corporations could put in a traffic station but they will not. So XM and Sirius are sticking up for people like myself.
